Android 9 screenshot sound

Turn off screenshot sound android 9.

Make Sound: You will no longer get the pop-up notification but will continue to receive sound on taking any screenshot. The Assistant, among other cool things, comes with an ability to take screenshots. There are no less than 3 ways to turn off the screenshot sound on Android devices and disable the pop-up notification altogether. If you own a stock Android device such as Google Pixel, one of the Nokia series phones, Xiaomi Mi A1 or Mi A2, etc., they don't disable the screenshot sound, even if you keep your phone on silent or vibration mode. But I can't turn down notifications. Show silently and minimize: Again, no sound or pop-up. Tap on Share Screenshot option. Doing so will show all the notifications related to screenshots, even when the DND mode is enabled. But, one thing that you might not have noticed is that when you do use the assistant for screenshot taking purposes, it doesn't make any sound. Turn off the Screenshot Notifications Now, you have the option to either turn off the Screenshot captured notifications altogether or modify it as per your requirements. You have the option of changing the default screenshot captured notification tone. Moreover, if you wish to get much detailed information on the DND, Silent and Airplane Mode, don't forget to check out our detailed guide. The former will turn off both the sound as well as the pop-up display. I need them. But it becomes quite troublesome when you have to take 3-4 screenshots at one go. Read Next: Get Screenshots with Rounded Corners on Android Other Ways to Turn Off Screenshot Sound Here are 2 more ways in which you can easily turn off the sound that you hear while taking screenshots on Android devices. There is no sound when you capture a screenshot with Google Assistant in any sound mode. [googleplay url = " In case you don't see the Share Screenshot option, type or say the command 'Take screenshot.' Note: The screenshot taken via this method will not be saved in your gallery. Select the app. The second one, and rather more irritating (in my case) is those large notification pop-ups. However, you could still access the screenshot captured notification from the Notification shade. Now that you have turned off these notifications, refer to these steps to turn off the pop-up notifications on your Chrome browser. Why did it happen? When you install the app and open it for the first time, you will have to allow it access to your phone's storage in order for it to save the screenshots directly to the gallery. Do you find the screenshot sound notification and pop-up box irritating? I'm on Android 11 and I followed this tutorial, but it doesn't work. Thankfully, there are a few workarounds and we will tell you about the two that we think are the best. Next, tap "Start capture monitoring services" at the top. However, if you want, you can disable it in the app settings.Download Screenshot Touch Click here to see our google assistant articles page Last updated on 5 Jul, 2019 The above article may contain affiliate links which help support Guiding Tech. Hence this app.It is extremely easy to use. 2. Since I take a lot of screenshots related to my work, doing gymnastics with power and volume button isn't my thing. Once you are done, turn off the screen capturing service of the app. Must read: How to Identify Fake Apps on Google Play Store Although it does sound good, there's a catch. Modify the Screenshot Notifications However, if you wish to modify it's settings, leave the box ticked and tap on the Screenshots keyword. You need to select the Upload to Google Photos option from the sharing options to save it to your phone.If you don't like the above method, you have another option of downloading certain third-party screenshot apps that enable this function Some of the apps that you can try are:1. To completely turn off the screenshot notifications, just untick the checkbox next to Screenshots (under System UI Settings). System UI Settings On your Android device, head over to Settings. Visit the Apps and Notifications section and tap on See all xx apps (where xx is the number of installed apps). Attached are screenshots of the ringer modes. This will show you all the system apps installed as well. The point is, stock devices don't provide an option to disable this sound. Finally, you may also add these Screenshots notifications to the Do not disturb whitelist. And, the most annoying part about it is not the sheer quantity of them, but the sound that my phone makes during the process. What's worse is that the sound can't be turned off even by putting the phone on silent or vibration. Weird but true.Not everyone is as lucky as Redmi or OnePlus users who have a built-in setting to turn off screenshot sound or even Samsung users who simply have to keep their phone on silent mode to avoid screenshot sound.Well, if you own an Android device that doesn't provide an option to disable screenshot sound, don't worry. So in this guide, we will be having a look at the steps to turn off screenshot captured notification sound and pop-up display. And, the one that I am using for the last few months is called Screenshot touch. So you just took a screenshot while your phone was on silent and boom, you heard the capture sound. Taking screenshots will display the pop up along with the notification sound. Yes i know that thanks. You will now have four options to choose from: Make sound and pop up on the screen: This is the current default one. It's actually pretty easy to use Screenshot touch. Moreover, the screenshot captured notification will be in it's minimized state in the Notification shade. Turn Off Screenshot Sound Notifications The Screenshot activities are handled by your device's System UI. Now, it will start capturing everything that's on your screen; just like a screen recording app does. By default, you only get to act on the user-installed apps. By now, you must know that you can use voice commands and make the assistant take screenshots. While we have shared a lot of tips about Google Assistant over time, there's a lot of new things that we keep learning about it even today. Refer to the steps to rectify this issue. The first is that pesky little notification sound that plays itself whenever any screenshot has been captured. Using Third-Party Apps Due to the problem mentioned above, some may not like using the Google Assistant for taking screenshots. The screenshots taken via the Google Assistant are not saved in the gallery by default. Agreed, that the pop-up is itself of some significance as it allows you to directly edit, delete or share that screen capture. Thanks If you set the ringer to vibrate or silence that also silences notifications, including the screenshot sound. You may even turn on the Vibration to vibrate your device every time a screenshot is taken. Don't Miss: Set Custom Notification Sounds in Facebook Messenger So rather than turning off these notifications, you could modify them using the above instructions. This could be done from the Sound section under Advanced. And guess what? Now whenever you need to take a screenshot, simply tap this icon. The button will turn red and you will see a floating camera icon. Hi, I'd like to disable the sound that the screenshot make. Receiving Gmail notifications with a delay on your OnePlus device? So before beginning with any the guide, you will have to navigate to the System UI Settings page. Your phone will vibrate after taking the screenshot. Whenever you capture any screenshot, there are two things that you might not be a fan of. Whaaat? You will then see the list of the apps where you can share the screenshot. If you don't do so, your most- recent taken screenshot will already show the screenshot captured notification of the previous image. Is something wrong with your phone? The second option lets you tweak its settings. Screenshot TouchThis is my favourite in the list. Whenever you want to take a screenshot, tap it and the app will take the screenshot without making any sound. Next, tap on the three vertical dots present at the top right and select "Show system". This is because it requires quite an effort in swiping left each pop-up before moving on to take the next screenshot. In this post, we shall tell you alternate methods to take screenshots without sound.Let's begin.1. Use Google AssistantAll Android phones running Android Lollipop+ come pre-installed with Google Assistant. No matter whether your phone is on silent or ringer, you will not hear the screenshot sound via this method. Meaning, even if all the sounds are enabled, you will hear no screenshot sound via this method.To capture a screenshot using Google Assistant, open the screen that you want to capture. Just tap on it to get it back to its expanded state (similar to the one you get under Show silently option). It has come a long way and has become an important part of Android. The content remains unbiased and authentic. Well, such people can use third-party apps to turn off screenshot sound on Android. However, it does not affect our editorial integrity. The only difference, however, is that it doesn't record and save all your activities on your phone, rather it gives you complete control over this process. You may also like: How to Customize Gmail Swipe Gestures on Android Screenshot touch offers some basic options like changing the save path, changing image format and quality, etc. Then hold the home button until Assistant pops up. Search for the System UI app and tap on Notifications. Using Google Assistant to Take Screenshots Google Assistant is the most useful thing you can have on an Android phone in 2018. When it's turned on, you will see a floating camera icon on the screen. 1. Nope. Show silently: You won't get the pop-up or notification sounds. Likewise, to manage WhatsApp notifications, have a look at our guide on the same topic. Next tap on Behaviour. When the screenshot is taken, you will see a sharing menu popup on the screen and you will have to use it save the screenshot on Google Photos or Google Drive or any other cloud storage option. Then only you could turn off the Screenshot captured notifications. Once you install the app, tap on Start capture monitoring service. We will have a look at both these methods. If you go ahead with the first or second option, you may further customize the screenshot notifications. I take a lot of screenshots every day for work purposes.
